Petitioner's October 26, 2007, Ex Parte Order to Show Cause Regarding Child Custody and Visitation and Modification of Drug Testing Orders.

The Court has considered the pleadings filed by the parties, the testimony of the witnesses, including the parties, and their respective arguments. As indicated by the Court in prior orders, the following orders are made pursuant to Family Code §§3022 and 3087. Previously, the Court has ordered a full Child Custody Evaluation to be conducted. The parties advised the Court that the report will not be completed until at least the middle of January 2008. Pursuant to the request of the parties, the prior dates set for the return of the evaluation and the evidentiary hearing on the Respondent's August 8, 2007, Order to Show Cause Regarding Child Custody and Visitation are vacated, and the evidentiary hearing is scheduled for April 9-11, 2008.

Evidence submitted by the parties indicates the Petitioner has completed three sessions of individual counseling and the parties have begun joint counseling and the Parenting Without Conflict course.

Pursuant to the Court's prior orders, Ms. Lisa Hacker, the court appointed Parenting Coach, prepared and submitted a report (Court's 1 dated October 19, 2007) to the Court. Ms. Hacker testified at length at the hearing of October 26, 2007, and was examined by Counsel for each party.

Ms. Hacker's report indicates that on three different days (September 28, October 4, and October 18) she made attempts to meet with the Petitioner in order to comply with the Court's orders. The Petitioner failed to meet with Ms. Hacker on those occasions. Since those initial attempts, Ms. Hacker did have the opportunity to meet with the Petitioner as ordered by the Court.

Ms. Hacker's report (Court's 1) details her observations made during her visits with the Petitioner. Ms. Hacker's report and her testimony makes it clear that she feels the Petitioner loves her children and the children are bonded to the Petitioner. However, Ms. Hacker made several observations that are of concern. Ms. Hacker expressed concern that many of Petitioner's interactions with the children are not child-centered. Ms. Hacker was also concerned that the Petitioner did not fully engage with the children when she interacted with them. Ms. Hacker wrote of the Petitioner's choices regarding activities in her report; "It seems that her choices are dependent more upon what she wants to do at any given time rather than what would be more enjoyable for the children."

Ms. Hacker further indicated that while with the Petitioner, the children have no real schedule or routine. She indicated that "[t]he environment at the house ranged from chaotic to almost somber with little communication at all." Ms. Hacker further reported that: "[d]uring all three of my visits Ms. Spears rarely engaged with the children in either conversation or play."

Ms. Hacker stated in her report and during the course of her testimony that she was concerned that neither of the Petitioner's residences were child-proofed.

Ms. Hacker reported that the Petitioner seemed to have a "lack of general attention at times." It is of concern that Ms. Hacker wrote that during her visits, the Petitioner had little or no interest in talking to or utilizing Ms. Hacker's guidance.

Ms. Hacker did report, and repeated in her testimony that there was nothing she "would characterize as abusive in a traditional sense." Ms. Hacker testified that after she issued her report to the Court, she had an additional visit with the Petitioner and the children (October 23, 2007). Ms. Hacker reported that visit was very different than the prior visits. Ms. Hacker testified that the Petitioner seemed much more engaged with her and the children. Ms. Hacker testified that the Petitioner's time with the children was very positive during the course of that session.

The testimony with regard to the October 23, 2007, session was a very positive indication of what the Petitioner's time with the minor children could be. However, it also raises questions as to why the Petitioner chose to act in the manner described by Ms. Hacker in the visits that were initially ordered by the Court and were the subject of the report of October 19, 2007. These are the kinds of issues that the Child Custody Evaluation and evidence presented by the parties at the evidentiary hearing on the matter will help to resolve.

Ms. Hacker closes her report by writing the following: "[t]he problem is that unless Ms. Spears realizes the consequences of her behavior and the impact that it has [on] her children, nothing is going to be successful."

No evidence was offered by either of the parties to controvert Ms. Hacker's observations or her description of the events that occurred during and surrounding her visits and work with the Petitioner.

The parties have submitted the reports of the monitors describing their observations made during the course of their time with the Petitioner and the children. The reports generally offer a positive appraisal of the Petitioner's time with the children; however several of the observations made by the monitors corroborate Ms. Hacker's concern with regard to the need for child-proofing at the Petitioner's home, the appropriateness of the activities selected by the Petitioner for these very young children, and the need for child centered sleeping routines for the children.

The Court has considered the pleadings and arguments made by Counsel with regard to the Court's orders pursuant to Family Code §3041.5. The Court notes the Petitioner's arguments regarding the type of testing ordered. In Deborah M. vs. Superior Court (2005) 128 Cal. App.4th 1181, the Court discussed the terms of Family Code §3041.5 with regard to the statutory language describing the type of testing that could or should be ordered under the statute. In Deborah M., the trial court had ordered the testing party to submit to hair follicle drug testing. The Court held that Family Code Section 3041.5(a) requires any court-ordered drug testing to conform to federal drug testing procedures and standards, and that those federal standards at present only allow for urine testing. Deborah M. vs. Superior Court (2005) 128 Cal.App.4th 1181, 1187. The Court further discusses the requirements that must be met by the testing facility with regard to the procedures and type of testing to be utilized when testing is ordered pursuant to the statute. The testing employed must meet the procedure and standards established by the United States Department of Health and Human Services.

The testing ordered in this case conforms to the requirements of Family Code §3041.5. There was no evidence offered by the Petitioner that would indicate that the testing procedure she proposed meets the requirements of the statute. Family Code §3041.5. The Court considered all of the evidence presented and the modification of the orders regarding the Petitioner's timeshare with the minor children. The Court has received and considered the results of the testing performed and the declarations provided by the parties of the personnel from the stipulated testing facility. This evidence documents the results of the tests and the facilities efforts to conduct the testing pursuant to the Court's orders.

THE COURT'S PRIOR ORDERS.

With regard to the parties' timeshare with the minor children, as indicated in the Court's prior orders, the Order to Show Cause filed by the Petitioner on August 8, 2007, raised significant issues. In response to these concerns and at the request of the parties, the Court ordered a full Child Custody Evaluation and set the matter for an evidentiary hearing. The Court then made interim orders. Despite the numerous ex parte Orders to Show Cause filed by the parties, as described above, the primary issue awaits resolution through the completion of the Child Custody Evaluation and the evidentiary hearing on the matter. The evidence submitted by the parties since the issuance of the Court's interim orders has been considered.

The Court makes the following orders with regard to the parties' timeshare with the children pending the completion and submission of the Child Custody Evaluation. These orders are made after consideration of all of the pleadings filed by the parties, the testimony of the parties and the testimony of the other witness and the arguments of respective counsel. With the following modifications, the Court's orders of September 17, 2007 and October 3, 2007, remain in full force and effect:

The Petitioner's timeshare with the minor children each week shall consist of two visits extending from 12:00 p.m. to 7:00 p.m. and one visit extending from 12:00 p.m. to 10:00 a.m. of the following day. These visits will be monitored pursuant to the Court's prior orders.

The parties are ordered to meet and confer and provide the Court by November 2, 2007, with a schedule of specific dates for the Petitioner's visitation. If the parties are unable to stipulate to a schedule, the Court will make appropriate orders.

The parties are ordered to meet and confer with regard to Holiday schedules and to submit a stipulated schedule or the parties' requests by November 2, 2007.

The Petitioner is ordered to submit verification that her residences have been child-proofed by November 2, 2007. This includes compliance with applicable city or Los Angeles County ordinances regarding pool safety.

The Court's prior orders with regard to Ms. Hacker are modified as follows: The Petitioner shall meet with Ms. Hacker one time per week for a two hour session at a location as indicated by Ms. Hacker.

The minor children are not to be transported in a motor vehicle by any party unless the children are properly secured in a properly installed child safety seat as described by the California Vehicle Code.

These orders are effective forthwith and shall remain in effect pending further Court order following the completion of the Child Custody Evaluation.
